

K9Sit.com Dog Boarding and Dog Training Agreement

This agreement covers all board and train programs for K9Sit.com from the date that the agreement has been signed.

K9Sit.com provides dog training services based on the needs of a dog and the dog’s owner. We are confident in our ability to improve the dogs we train and will do the work to the best of our ability. We hope owners are satisfied with the result of our training.

At K9Sit.com we are proud of our methods and protocols. We deliver professional, top-quality training; however, we cannot guarantee behavior results or the future behavior for any dog. Even with hard work some owners may not feel their dog has improved very much or at all. We do our best work but can offer no guarantee of the training results.

If a dog injures people or animals while the dog is under the care of K9Sit.com, we accept full legal responsibility for the actions of the dog while it is under our care. We provide no warranty on our training and do not accept any responsibility for how the dog behaves when it is not under our care. K9Sit.com reserves the right to discontinue training for any reason. If at some point in the training process we decide that our services will not benefit the dog, we will contact the owner, issue a full refund, and return the animal. 3. If the dog becomes ill or injured while staying with K9Sit.com, the dog will be taken to a veterinarian, and the owner will be contacted. If a dog dies as a result of an accident, we will refund the cost of the training but offer no other financial reimbursement for the lost animal. If an owner cannot or will not pay for the veterinary care of a dog that becomes ill or injured, the animal will be euthanized. If an owner does not pick up their dog at the end of the board and train period, it will be taken to a government-run animal control facility.

Transition session(s) where we work with the dog’s owners and handlers are provided as part of our board and train packages and will be discussed with the owner in detail. Owners must work with their dog and implement the transition to home as described by the trainers to ensure that they have a successful long term relationship with their dog.
